

I. Introduction	13
1. History of Communication	14
1.1. The newspaper and other communication media as history sources	15
1.2. On the crisis of history	16
1.3. The problem of multiplicity	17
1.4. A human return	19
1.5. The History of Communication at the present time	20
2. Communication in history	22
2.1. Pre-printed journalistic information precedents	23
2.2. Elements that helped on the dawn of newspapers	24
2.2.1. The postal service	24
2.2.1. The printing press	25
2.2. The first gazettes	27
II. The press: from absolute control to freedom (1500-1815)	29
1. Information in the absolute monarchy	29
1.1. Attitude of government officials towards the press	29
1.2. Legal situation of the press in the ancien régime	30
1.3. The traditional absolutist model	31
1.3.1. Gazette	32
1.3.2. Journal des savants	32
1.3.3. Mercure galant	33

1.3.4. Renaudot, the father of modern journalism	33
1.4. The pre-liberal or imperfect absolutist model	35
1.4.1. The London gazette: The official newspaper	36
1.4.2. Moral gazettes	36
1.4.3. Magazines	37
1.4.4. Ad sheets	37
1.4.5. Political journals	37
2. The crisis of absolutism in the 18 th century press	37
2.1. Weakening the foundations of absolutism	37
2.2. Development of the critical press in France	38
3. Journalism and propaganda	40
3.1. New developments in the period	40
3.2. Modern revolutionary propaganda	42
3.3. Napoleon, the propagandist	44
4. The press in the revolutionary process	46
4.1. Freedom of the press in France	46
4.1.1. The conquest of freedom	47
4.1.2. Unlimited freedom	47
4.1.3. The suppressed freedom	48
4.1.4. Limited freedom	48
4.1.5. Controlled freedom	48
4.2. The Independence of the Press in the USA	49
5. Communication in liberal states	50
5.1. The evolution in the main countries	51
5.1.1. The cases of Great Britain and France	51
5.1.2. New Developments in the Newly Established United States	52
5.2. Political communication and parliamentarianism	54
5.3. Technical improvements	57
5.3.1. Multiplication of copies	57
5.3.2. The reproduction of graphic elements	58
5.3.3. The processes of news transmission	59

III. Industrialization of the press and bourgeois freedom (1815-1870)	63
1. The liberal conception of information	63
1.1. Censorial liberalism	63
1.2. From partisan political press to news press	64
2. Background	66
2.1. Factors influencing the new landscape	66
2.2. First news agencies	67
3. Advertising: origins to 1870	69
3.1. First steps of print advertising	70
3.2. Advertising and the popular press	71
3.3. Institutionalization: the advertising agencies	73
4. The press in the bourgeois society	74
4.1. The British style of quality newspapers	75
4.2. Popular press: beginnings in the USA and France	77
4.2.1. The United States	77
4.2.5. France	77
4.2.3. British popular press	78
4.2.4. Development of the press in other countries	80
IV. Communication activity as a business (1870-1914)	85
1. The press and the spread of the democratic system	85
1.1. State control in the new liberal regimes	86
1.2. Development of the news agencies	87
1.3. Expanding the communication field: photography and posters	88
2. Development of modern advertising	92
2.1. The main agencies	93
2.2. New advertising techniques	94
2.3. Towards the professionalization of advertising	95
2.4. Advertising and social campaigns	96
3. The persistence of doctrinal and ideological journalism	97
3.1. Socialist newspapers	97
3.1.1. Germany	99
3.1.2. France	99

3.2. The Catholic confessional press	100
3.2.1. France	101
3.2.2. Germany	101
3.2.3. Spain	102
4. The new information press	102
4.1. The great generation of American popular press	102
4.2. Joseph Pulitzer	104
4.2.1. Features of American sensationalist journalism	105
4.2.2. Yellow journalism	106
4.2.3. Quality newspapers	108
4.3. United Kingdom and Lord Northcliffe	109
4.3.1. Lord Northcliffe	110
4.4. The French case	111
5. Professionalization of journalism and lectures	112
5.1. The associative phenomenon	113
5.2. Lecturing on journalism	115
V. The crisis of traditional media	119
1. Information at the collapse of the liberal-democratic spirit	119
1.1. The Great War and the questioning of the liberal system	119
1.2. The liberal conception of information	120
1.3. Problems of the Press in the Interwar Period	120
1.4. Major news agencies: Developments	122
2. Persuasive scientific communication	123
2.1. Special circumstances of the First World War	123
2.2. The activity of the British government	124
2.3. Propaganda in other countries during the war	125
2.4. Effectiveness in the communist revolution and origins of the USSR ..	126
2.5. The Nazis and the creation of a real propaganda machine	127
3. The beginnings of public relations	128
3.1. The background	129
3.1.1. Terminological distinctions	129
3.1.2. United states	129

3.2. Special circumstances in the United States	132
3.3. Ivy Lee's contributions	134
3.4. The crucial role of Bernays	136
4. The evolution of the written press	140
4.1. The development of the press in liberal and democratic regimes	140
4.1.1. The United States	140
4.1.2. United Kingdom	141
4.1.3. France	142
4.2. Journalistic activity in authoritarian countries	143
4.2.1. Germany	143
4.2.2. Italy	144
5. The first development of the audiovisual media	145
5.1. Introduction of the cinematograph	146
5.2. Radio in its early days and in the Interwar period	149
5.2.1. Birth and splendor in the United States	151
5.2.2. The British singularity	153
5.2.3. Radio in Germany	155
5.2.4. A mixed model in France	156
VI. The audiovisual age (1945-...)	161
1. From Cold War to a globalized world	161
1.1. The effects of World War II: Winners and Losers	161
1.2. Ideological struggle within democratic countries	164
1.3. The Counter-culture	165
1.4. The decline of Communism and the change in the World map	166
2. Media and their political role	169
2.1. The media landscape and the inadequacy of liberal approach	169
2.2. The reaction in democratic countries: the Hutchins Report	169
2.3. Authoritarian and totalitarian regimes Against information colonialism	172
3. The birth and configuration of national television	174
3.1. Birth and first technical improvements	174
3.2. The creation of national systems and major televised events	176

3.3. From public SERVICE television to private initiative	179
3.3.1. Technological development	179
3.3.2. Commercial television	179
3.4. Public television	180
3.4.1. United states	181
3.4.2. United Kingdom	181
3.4.3. Germany	181
3.4.4. France	181
4. The leadership of the audiovisual	182
4.1. TV: at the core of the communications business	182
4.2. This is... CNN	182
4.3. Mergermania	184
4.4. News corporation	185
4.5. WarnerMedia	185
4.6. Technical advances	187
4.7. The fight for audiences and programming strategies	187
4.8. Television, political activity and surveys	190
4.8.1. Opinion polls	191
4.8.2. Gallup arrives	191
4.8.3. Politicians and TV	192
4.8.4. A language of their own	193
4.8.5. War tv	194
4.8.6. Election campaigns	194
5. The transformation of print journalism into electronic journalism	196
5.1. The loss of readers	196
5.2. Crisis of graphic magazines and relevant titles	198
5.3. The quality press and cheap, high-circulation newspapers	199
5.3.1. United Kingdom	199
5.3.2. United states	200
5.3.3. Germany	200
5.4. The technical change in the traditional printing industry	200
6. Radio in a TV-Dominated market	201

6.1. New radio technologies to compete with television	201
6.2. Specialization as a response	203
6.3. Private radio stations in countries with a radio monopoly	204
6.4. Radio becomes a digital medium	206
7. Persuasive communication reaches new audiences	207
7.1. Cold War and propaganda	207
7.1.1. Against communism	208
7.1.2. Communists	209
7.2. New ways of persuading	210
7.3. Constant growth of advertising	213
7.3.1. What are the reasons for this boom in advertising activity?	213
7.4. Territorial expansion of the big American agencies	214
7.5. The unstoppable development of PR	217
8.1. Defining the area	219
8.2. The crisis of the American industry and the rise of the new avant-garde	220
8.2.1. The end of the study system	220
8.2.2. The reconstruction of Europe and the arrival of the new cinematic avant-garde	221
8.3. The new American cinema and new commercial approaches	222
8.3.1. The dominance of American cinema returns	222
8.3.2. European cinema in search of its identity	224
9. The new information technologies	225
9.1. Conversion from traditional to electronic media	225
9.2. Fiber optics and the audiovisual revolution	226
9.3. The progressive role of the Internet	228
Bibliography	233